Quality charter

Fresh & refined teas selected by our sommeliers from the best gardens around the world.

The best gardens

To select our tea leaves, we send our sommeliers directly to producers in different gardens around the world. If the tea leaves and their liquor meet all our quality criteria, they are sent to the factory.

Original & delicate flavors

The greatest care is taken when composing the flavored teas. Dried fruits, flower petals, spices or even natural flavors are carefully selected. Many tests are carried out in order to find the best balance in terms of both taste and visual appearance of the teas.

Packaging

Our commitment to quality has led us to abandon bulk sales in large iron containers. In fact, the leaves, which are regularly in contact with air, lose their initial freshness.

The packaging in 50g packets allows all the qualities of the tea leaves to be kept intact as if they had just been picked.

Rigorous process

One of the particularities of LUPICIA is to manage the entire manufacturing process, from the purchase of tea leaves directly from producers, through transport, sorting, packaging and up to retail sale in our boutiques.

LUPICIA is the only house to offer a 6-step tea leaf sorting process. Automated and specially made to measure, this system eliminates any foreign body within the leaves.

Protective atmosphere

In order to keep their freshness and aromatic subtlety intact, our teas are packaged in 50g containers in a protective atmosphere.

This process brings many advantages:

- It prevents the oxidation of tea leaves
- It preserves vitamins
- It prevents any change in aroma or color
- It prevents any development of bacteria.

Tasty and slightly astringent sencha green tea,
rich in catechin and can be consumed daily.

This bouquet is found on the palate, with a gourmet roundness brought by both the chestnut and the matcha, while maintaining its balance thanks to the green tea.
